

BEYOND THE RUBBER STAMP

The Approval Queue Is Not Oversight: When to Let the Agent Decide

How the human-in-the-loop became a ritual that erodes the judgement it promises — and what to calibrate instead

Giovanni Leonardi

September 2024

The Approval Queue Is Not Oversight: When to Let the Agent Decide

Transformation · No. 328

Originally written September 2024 | Re-edited and re-rendered for the WhereBeyond Edition, 2025

“The rare catastrophic error is precisely the one a habituated four-second reviewer waves through, because by the time it arrives their capacity to notice anything has already gone.”

The full paper content is stored verbatim in the `===CONTENT===` section below (real line breaks, unescaped, so it round-trips exactly).